“Innovative ideas are only part of the picture in improving government processes,” said Center Executive Vice President Cathilea Robinett. “The real story lies with the determined individuals who drive initiatives with clear leadership and the agency employees who work tirelessly to provide constituents with services that improve their lives. The Center is proud to honor the New York agencies that are leading by example and demonstrating how technology – combined with a passion for progress – can dramatically improve government processes at a lower cost. Congratulations to the winners!”
